

Douglas Mawson Book Lists

Included in Douglas Mawson's Antarctic Diaries is a list of books included in the equipment of the British Antarctic Expedition of 1908-09, led by Shackleton aboard Nimrod in which Mawson served as "Physicist" of the expedition. The books are mentioned in Mawson's Antarctic Diaries, ed. By Fred & Eleanor Jacka (Sydney 1988) p. 6 under the entry for 12 January 1908. The original pencil ms. diary is Notebook 2 (16 December 1908 – 10 February 1909, entitled "Douglas Mawson, his diary of journey from depot on shore of Ross Sea, N of Drygalski Glacier to South Magnetic Pole" (Jacka, p. xiii). The handwritten list is in most cases quite specific about the edition and these have been relatively easy to identify Another two-page typed list was prepared for the Australasian Antarctic Expedition of 1911-14 of which Mawson was the leader; some of those physical books are shown in the Jacka edition of the diaries, the 7th plate following p. 62, depicting Winter Quarters at Cape Denison. The diaries, originally held by the Mawson Institute of Antarctic Research at the University of Adelaide are now a part of the South Australian Museum. I am most grateful to Mark Pharoah of the South Australian Museum in Adelaide for help in providing copies of the original lists.

In the following transcripts of these two lists, the original text appears in boldface, followed by expanded titles of the likely editions, transferred from the international data bases of RLIN or COPAC. In trying to identify probable editions included we have favored the British editions most likely available in Australia, and editions closest in time to the outset of the expedition. Some editions cannot be identified (e.g. the Koran or "several scientific pamphlets") and are so noted. Some physical volumes are still extant and where known that has been indicated as well.

Australian Antarctic Expedition 1911-14: Library

For this later expedition, there are four lists, each of which is divided into the owners or sources of the books who are indicated in the right hand column as follows:

D.M. Dr. Douglas Mawson: leader

Mackellar. Library. Charles Mackellar was an English financier who donated a “small” library to the expedition, some of which survive in Adelaide.

Bage Lieut. Robert Bage: astronomer, assistant magnetician and recorder of tides

Stillwell Frank L. Stillwell: geologist

Hodgeman Alfred J. Hodgeman: cartographer and sketch artist

Capt. Davis John K. Davis: master of SY Aurora and second in command of the expedition.

Philip Ayres biography of Mawson (Mawson: a life. Melbourne, Aus.: The Miegunyah Press, 1999), describes the library as follows: “The AAE’s [Australian Antarctic Expedition, 1911-14] library was almost equally provided by Campbell Mackellar and Mawson himself. The books from Mackellar included literature of Arctic and Antarctic travel, scientific textbooks and general literature. Mawson’s contributions included, besides popular volumes of Antarctic literature like Shackleton’s Heart of the Antarctic and H. R. Mill’s Siege of the South Pole, volumes of scientific results from Scott’s 1900-4 Discovery expedition, W. S. Bruce’s 1902 Scotia expedition, the BAE, Otto Nordenskjöld's 1901-3 Antarctic expedition, and Jean Charcot's first, 1903-5, expedition. He also supplied volumes of popular poets like Rudyard Kipling and Robert Service, anthologies, and other items including the Meditations of Marcus Aurelius (which reflect Mawson's austere and stoic credo, above any particular religion). Interestingly, he took German Self-Taught, a recognition of Germany's superiority in many scientific and technological fields." p. 52: [footnote 38 notes that "the AAE's library is itemized in MAC, 43 AAE," referring to the Mawson Antarctic Collection, Waite Campus, University of Adelaide.]

A second edition appeared in 1903.

D.M.2.

The following six entries describing past expeditionary experience are difficult to interpret bibliographically, i.e. what actual publications are represented, and whether the subheadings listed are merely subject headings, or represent individual volumes that may be subsections of larger works. The list does reflect the fairly extensive coverage of past polar experience available to this expedition (cf. Scott's complaint that he had insufficient materials of polar exploration).
